

43rd Annual IAPSP International Conference

Finding Ourselves in Uncertain Times: Emergent Processes of Change and Transformation

Hosted By: International Association for Psychoanalytic Self Psychology (IAPSP)

Co-Sponsored By: Institute of Contemporary Psychotherapy + Psychoanalysis (ICP+P)

Thursday, October 20 – Sunday, October 23, 2022

Omni Shoreham | 2500 Calvert St. NW | Washington, DC |

DEAR COLLEAGUES,

We look forward to welcoming you to Washington, D.C., October 20-23, 2022, for IAPSP's first hybrid conference featuring in-person events in Washington, simultaneous live streaming, and recorded virtual events. This new format provides expanding opportunities for attendees around the world to participate in the conference. Our conference theme, Finding Ourselves in Uncertain Times: Emergent Processes of Change and Transformation, builds on the way the world and our lives have changed since we gathered together in Vancouver, B.C. three years ago. These changes have affected our personal and family lives, our professional practices, and our collective experience as an international organization. We come together now in our shared experience of ongoing uncertainty, threat, and loss that has deeply affected all of us even as it provides us as a community with new opportunities for hope and connection.

In this conference, we will explore how we can meet the demands and challenges of uncertain times, both clinically and organizationally. This conference will directly address the core mission of IAPSP—improving the lives of individuals and societies by exploring the emergent processes of growth and transformation. A focus on the potential for recovery and growth even in the face of worldwide loss and trauma is an essential self psychological attitude.

While we very much hope you can join us in-person in Washington DC, we recognize that this may not be possible for everyone. Offering hybrid options to reach IAPSP members and other colleagues around the globe will broaden our reach and support us as we come together with an ongoing dedication to relieve suffering and to make a difference in people's lives.

For those attending in-person, we will host an opening night reception in order to joyfully greet old friends and make new ones. The reception will be followed by a tribute to the late Joseph Lichtenberg, with his friends and collaborators sharing memories and expressing appreciation for Joe's important contributions to contemporary self psychology.

An exciting and diverse array of four plenaries will address a number of important themes. First, we look at the role of play and playfulness in the evolving ways we are conducting our clinical practices during these uncertain times. Second, we will explore what transformation could look like in the theory, practice and institutional life of psychoanalysis following this tumultuous period. Coming next will be a moving clinical case in which a young woman's developmental trauma intersects with a pandemic-induced experience of isolation and disconnection, deeply affecting both members of the dyad. In the final plenary, we explore how we can help our patients live with human tragedy and the inevitable contingencies and necessities of the human world. We are proud to inform you that the four plenary sessions will be live-streamed to offer global participation.

The main conference will be preceded by a full day of pre-conference workshops where attendees will have an opportunity for an in-depth exploration of an array of topics including couples therapy, teaching virtually, evolution, and other clinical topics. We also will offer 22 paper sessions that engage a broad range of topics and clinical challenges.

We look forward to your participation at the conference!

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

The conference is organized to facilitate maximum opportunity for questions, comments and dialogue between the audience and the presenters, allowing clinicians to engage in an extensive variety of topics relevant to the field of Self Psychology. At the conclusion of this conference, participants will be able to:

1. Describe the ways in which COVID safety lockdowns and the shift toward online video platforms has impacted our efforts to meet the mental health needs of our patients.
2. Discuss various ways of making sense of and reorganizing our approaches to clinical practice given the combined, though differing effects, of multiple forms of trauma on our patients while we as clinicians are also subjected to these traumas.
3. Discuss the impact of race, class, privilege, and social justice on the experiences of trauma that will be explored throughout the conference in the plenaries and paper sessions.
4. Describe how living and working in a world that feels uncertain impacts our efforts to help our patients live with human tragedy and with the inevitable contingencies and necessities of the human world.
5. Describe the ways in which the essential attitudes of self psychological theory and practice, empathy, compassion and curiosity in the subjective experience of the other (including explorations of race, class, privilege, and sexual and gender diversity) can promote the potential for recovery and growth in the face of diverse and widespread experiences of loss and trauma.
6. Discuss the potential transformations in the theory, practice and institutional life that might evolve in response to finding everything in our lives, and our practices, turned upside down and floating in the air.
